

ACADEMIC COUNSELING

We at NECG understand the complex nature of Academic counseling, to make things easy we don't use different terms like advising, counseling, advisor, and mentor separately for different roles played by a counselor. We use mentor as a common job role name for all counseling/advisory/guidance necessary for mentee.

Academic counseling to students is given by mentor as a series of intentional interactions with students related to curriculum, methods of teaching, learning outcomes, educational experiences etc., based on students ambition, interests and abilities.

Over and above mentioned issues an academic counselor also guides students to find resources for their educational advancement, ways to improve their poor academic performance, time management and organizational skills.

Under academic counseling students also get suitable suggestions for selecting various Massive Open Online Courses (MOOCS), choice based credit course (CBCC) courses and electives.

Our dedicated Professor in-charge and faculty in-charges for academic counseling, they make sure that the system is properly implemented; they also consolidate the individual reports given by mentors and submit it to head of institution for suitable control action. The structure is as given below.
