

PERSONAL COUNSELING

Personal counseling is a process of self-discovery and growth. It can help increase self-confidence, improve relationships, solve problems, achieve educational goals, and make good decisions for emotional, intellectual, physical, and spiritual well-being.

A personal counselor is a faculty member, who gives valuable assistance to students, helps them with their academic goals, social wellbeing, personality and career development.

Personal counseling for students is also given to help student who have psychiatric problems such as; Homesickness, difficulty in adjusting to the college, anxiety, addictive behaviors, loneliness and isolation.

At NECG One to one personal counseling is done once in fifteen days by respective student counselor, or counselor may advise the student to meet him based on their general behavior in the class, or student can meet counselor to get advice whenever necessary with prior appointment.

Personal counseling is continuously monitored by
